Paint & Household
by Bob D'Angelo

Q. Will putting screens into gutters prevent blockage? I have this problem every year about this time. D.K.

A. It is my opinion only that screening gutters causes more harm than good. Twigs and leaves may get caught in the screening, collapse if not maintained, impeding the flow of water to the downspouts.

When gutters clog, often the weight of the junk collected in them will cause the gutter to bow, also prohibiting the water from reaching the downspout.

If some of the gutter spikes have come free from the fascia, don't drive it into the same hole. It will soon loosen. Keep the same outside hole in your gutter, but angle the spike slightly to get a good bite. Clean as much of the gutter that you can by hand, and then use your garden hose to clear the gutter. Shove the hose down into the leader and use the pressure of the water to clean the leader. Do that until the water flows freely from the leader.

Q. My house is a ranch style home where part of the roof extends five feet in front of the structure to act as an overhang walkway. I have constant problems getting paint to adhere to that soffit in particular. What would you suggest? A&T E.K.

A. A common problem in soffetts is paint flaking rather than peeling. Here on Long Island, it is generally the result of salt laden being near the water. This dandruff-like flaking can be removed by using a wire brush. It is important that the area be thoroughly dry before attempting to both prime and paint. Having a few foot overhang causes an added problem. When it snows, the snow on the roof above the living space will thaw sooner because of the heat rising. The melting snow will be blocked by the unheated snow of the overhanging soffett. Therefore, water may back up and run under the shingles and cause water damage.

Q. I read your column every week and find it extremely helpful. This is my question: I am planning to paint the interior of my house and would like to purchase some paint tools, i.e., brushes, rollers, etc. You have mentioned from time to time disposable brushes vs. quality brushes. I'm not sure which to purchase. W.H.

A. In my opinion, disposable paint products are only for a limited way. If my project can be painted in less than five minutes, I usually use a disposable brush. Disposable bristle brushes usually shed their bristles too easily. Therefore, I prefer a poly (sponge) brush.

As far as paint rollers go, don't buy cheap or disposable rollers. It'll cost you more in heartaches when your roller falls apart during your painting project. It is relatively easy to keep your brushes and roller clean if you use a spinner. A spinner is a plunger operated tool that spins both rollers and brushes clean. Spin them out in a paper bag, and not your basement shop sink for neat and ecological reasons.

If you use oil paint for trim as you should, a china bristle brush is recommended, and can be suspended in a coffee can filled with paint thinner to keep the brush clean. Drill a hole into the handle and slide a thin metal rod through the hole to suspend the brush. Otherwise, the bristles will bend and settle into the pigment at the bottom of the thinners.

For best results, get good tools, and maintain them. It will cost you less money in the long run, and you'll always have good equipment on hand when you need it available.
